Mr. Wheatley's 'How to make an Index' (Elliot Stock, 5*s.*) deserves a warm welcome from all librarians, whose endeavours to help readers would often be greatly forwarded if indexes were more generally and more carefully made. From the Bibliographical Society of Chicago there comes a handsome reprint of the paper by Augustus de Morgan, 'On the Difficulty of Correct Description of Books,' originally printed in the 'Companion to the Almanac' for 1853. Readers of the new volumes of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica' will find interesting articles on Bookbinding by Mr. Cyril Davenport, and on Bookprinting by Mr. Ricketts. Otherwise bookish literature just now seems non-existent.

A. W. P.

Downloaded from http://library.oxfordjournals.org/ at University of California, San Fransisco on April 26, 2015

Downloaded from http://library.oxfordjournals.org/ at University of California, San Fransisco on April 26, 2015